When you have bought your ticket for a pleasure trip, doesn't it jar you to have the baggageman demand "excess baggage"? It seems like throwing money away. There are several "excess baggage" charges on every cigar you buy through the ordinary method of tetalling. You pay the growers' profit, leaf-buying charges, cigar brokering and wholesaling operations, and "in-between" handling expenses that are useless. The United Cigar Stores system relieves you of the "excess baggage" charges. We sell right to the smokers the output of a dozen large factories growing their own Havana tobacco. We are the shortling be their own Havana tobacco. We are the shortline between grower, maker and smoker. We have cut out all "in-between" profits, giving you the saving in heightened quality of cigars. Here's a good example:
